story of Evan and Jane and John, also Windyslav Bavaliaweski, but as you cannot pronounce that name and nobody at Brandy Patch tried to, he shall be called Reddy Mike, for so he was known to the Patch, even at the postoffice.

Just when it happened is immaterial, but it is true, for I had it from Tommy Duffy, the foreboas at the Katy Did, and no miner doubts Tommy's word.

"Onsyway," which is Tommy's style of beginning a story, the men on Mackin's porch stopped smoking and stared up the hill, beyond the culm-bank, at a figure coming down the road from Gritfith's house; and as anything so momentous as to cause the smoke to stop puffing and swelling and rising from Mackin's porch is most remarkable, the yomen going down to the spring halted

"Shure 'tis Evan, the bhoy," said Tommy Duffy. And everybody agreed, which was not the first time.

"An' not eight be the clock," announced Tommy. Again the murmur of

This was the situation. I could tell it in the way that Tommy Duffy told me, but I shall not, because it you are not a Connaught man you would not understand it, and if you are a Far Down you would not read it.

In Griffith's cottage lived Jane, his daughter, which is not at all strange, but what is strange is that for a month past Evan had been going there every evening, at half-past seven, as soon as he was "washed up" and had his supper. He stayed until after 10. If you tnew Evan, the fickle and vet much favored, you would realize what this meant. Everybody at the Patch did and so did Evan and Jane, and, much to his serrow, John also.

When Evan was seen going there on pay-day evening, of all nights, Tommy Duffy had turned his pipe bowl downward and said there was "a foine house to rint on Parrish row," while the girls of the Patch looked around for others; and cast Evan out of their hearts, even as Jane had cast John forth a few nights after Evan's first call. When you know this you can guess that John and Evan smiled when he said, "Hello, John."

Well, onnyway," as Tommy Duffy would say, the crowd on Mackin's porch stopped smoking, and in silence watched Evan as he stalked down the road. It was only 8 o'clock remember. When he reached the porch there was still silence. He sat in a corner and whistled softly to himself. Tommy Duffy surveyed him critically for a few minutes and then re-lighted his pipe. The others did likewise. For ten minutes the smoke arose heavily and then some one at the far end hurled a political opinion broadside at his fellows. No one answered, but all watched Tommy Duffy knock the ashes out of his pipe on the heel of his hand, re-fill it, and then extend the blue pa-

"Nope," growled Evan. Again the thoughtful silence, but soon a senseless fellow, a mere driver boy, and new in the mine, too, as one might see, chirped:

"Ah'm goin' away, Jane, up to Sugar Notch. Ah don't like work here, an' a've got a good job there. Ah saw a little house, four room an' a wash-kitchen outside, an' a've got a hundred dollars saved up. You'll like the house. There's a bit of a garden, an' a pump right in the yard."

Jane looked at the moon, but said nothing.

"An' a've kot a little life insurance."

Still there was no answer "An' a've fine elik dress, you could cut it down to fit you."

Then he took her hand, and she pointed to a ring on the third finger.

New York Evening Post; This is the | Reddy Mike, set in a corner and gruntquestions, for he was Evan's laborer. and beyond this said nothing excep "Me work him breast, load five car coal every day, meself," which, as he is a Slav, and Slavs, poor, ignorant creatures, never know when to stop working, was not remarkable.

Denny Doris, who was ambitious, and besides working in the Katy Did, was correspondent for the Sunday Bugle, heard all there was to be heard, and like a good "scribe," as he called him-self, drew his own conclusions. So, when, on the fourth day after Evan's disappearance, the Bugle's Brandy Patch edition, which was like all the other editions, contained in black letters a headline, "Suicided for Love," and went on to tell the story just related, and added that "after diligent inquiry the Bugle reporter learned that a man answering Evan's description was seen walking toward the river on the night in question," no further evidence was needed that the man Evan had ended his earthly woes by drown ing himself. Indeed, the Bugle reporter went so far as to hint that the cause of the quarrel was Jane's partiality for John.

When John read this he washed his face, put on a new red and blue tie, and went up to Griffith's house, where he found Jane with very red eyes and a desire to sit in the shadow. Then the tongue which had made John chairman of the local labor union and a delegate to the Republican convention upheld its reputation for suavity, and gained for its owner a gentle pressure of the hand, and a "Come again—John," which Tommy Duffy said proved "that gals ain't got no hearts," but which to my mind really proves that they have.

John went again, the next night, and Jane's eyes were not read at all, moreover the gate was very hard to open.

or to close, or something, when he de-parted. '
The next day, John, who was assist-ant fire boss at the Katy Did, rushed shouting to the foot of the shaft, threw himself on the carriage and was jerked at the rate of fifty feet to the second, to the surface. He stumbled towards the engine house, white and trembling, and with nervous fingers fumbled in the far corner of the "waste" hox for the engineer's little brown bottle. When the engineer rescued it, some color was the engineer's little brown bottle. When the engineer rescued it, some color was in John's face, but he trembled so that he sat down, and with the tremor in his limbs duplicated in his voice he ex-claimed:

"A've seen a ghost. Evan's ghost. Sure as ahm alive. In the old Simpson vein. Was lookin' for gas, Went through No. 4 headin'. Ah hears a noise. Nobody works here, ah says. den a man comes out of a breast. Ah says hello. He never answer. 'Hello,' ah says. He come on. Ah saw it was Evan. All shimmery and white like. He just points. Ah couldn't move. Then he disappears, Out ah cames, doubting that. He stil itrembled, al-

He was frightened. There was no doubting that. He still trembled, although it was broad daylight, but the engineer laughed, and so did Tommy Duffy, and so did—well, everybody. That same afternoon Reddy Mike was seriously burned by an explosion of gas in Evan's chamber.

"Ah told you, ah told you," cried John, although he had done nothing of the kind; "he's come to ha'nt the mine."

Tommy Duffy and a "gang" went down to look at the damage. As they approached the breast there was a crackling and a roar, and they sprang might see, chirped:

"Yer down early, Evan."

Every one could see that and it was absurd to state it. Sense was punched into his ribs by the two old men sitting within reach, and with a grunt he subsided.

But the words had been the spur to Evan's tongue. He jumped to his feet and shouted across the street to his boarding mistress, who was leaning over the gate:

"I give up my place. Get somebody else."

An interrogatory murmur rumbled in the stem of Tommy Duff's pipe.

"Yep," said Evan solemily. "I'm agoin", You'll never see me again. Goodby."

Before the pipes were out of the mouths which held them he was off down the road. In a moment he had turned the corner by the breaker and disappeared. The next day he had not sell hed ark, and rambled over the hills above, where the laurel bushes grow high, and hide the neat little cockpit where, on a Sunday, the chickens—but that is but Tommy Duff's gossip. Where a big mass of outcropping coal cast a deep shadow they sat down, and after the lights in time to escape being crushed by a fall of coal from the roof.

That settled any doubts John might have had. "He'll kill us all." he cried 'he's and will us now had. "He'll kill us all." he cried 'he's come back to kill us." and with that he told "old man" Jennings to get somebody else in his place.

In the evening he and Jane went realisting but he did not teil her about Evan's gbcst, nor about something end the they somebody else in his place.

The next night they avoided Mackins' porch and its comments in their walk, and rambled over the hills above, where the laurel bushes grow high, and hide the neat little cockpit where, on a Sunday, the chickens—but that is but Tommy Duff's gossip. Then he took her hand, and she pointed to a ring on the third finger.
"Evan gave me that," she said.
John tried to take it off.
"No," she cried, "leave it on. Dead or alive. Evan's the same to me, the only man as I'll ever—like."
"Aw, say—" began John, then he suddenly dropped ber hands and jumped up, staring wildly past her. She saw him trembling; then she followed his gase. There, dim and shadowy and motionless, stood Evan.
With a faint cry John fied down the hillside. Jane heard him crashing through the laurels, and then there was silence. She stepped back once, and then again, and then Evan bounded forward and his arms were about her.
"You ain't no ghost," she said, with decision.
"Naw," he replied, with diagust.
"When I got mad because you believed what John said 'bout nee goin' with a girl at Broderick's, and you said you never wanted to see me again, I thought as how I would go away for a while. So never wanted to see me again. I thought as how I would go away for a while. So I just hid in the mine, in old workin's, and Reddy Mike brought me stuff to eat. But he ain't been down since yesterday, an' I got hungry and just come up the old manway in this outcrop, and I heard what you said."

"Aw, you did," she replied.

"Yep-and I ain't had nothin' to eat for two days."

"I've got some cold meat an' bread at the house," she said, and then doubtfully, "and milk."

It cost me two pipefuls of tobacco to get the rest of the story out of Tommy Duffy, butyou can easily guess it.

A Veteran's Story.—George Lewis, of Shamokin, Pa., writes: "I am eighty years of age. I have been troubled with Catarth for fifty years, and in my time I have used a great many catarrh cures, but never had any relief until I used Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. One box cured me completely."—Sold by Charles R. Goeize, Twelfth and Market streets.—13.

FOES Health

"My sufferings were almost unbearable, and only persons having been afflicted with this rare and dreaded combination of diseases can imagine what they were like. I was confined to my bed almost all the time. My doctor finally acknowledged that neither he nor any one else could cure me. I would not give up, so tried different medicines, and finally began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. The first box of pills helped me some, and I took some more. The second box began to produce the desired result, and before I had finished the fourth box I was at last a cured man. That was last March, and I have not been troubled with these diseases since."-From Banner Plain Dealer, North Vernan, Ind.

specialties, which served to unsettle the market and eventually to turn the tide in favor of the reactionists. Continued depression was manifest at the opening in Third Avenue, People's Gas, Leather and Sugar. As the day progressed other stocks came under pressure and the group above named showed some recovery. The iron and steel group were the first affected by the spread of weakness, Tennessee Coal dropping an extreme 5 points and American Hoop, National Steel, Tin Plate, Federal Steel, Steel & Wire, Colorado Fuel and Republic Steel from 1 to 3 points. Later the announcement of the dividend on Consolidated Gas at the reduced rate established since the local war was in effect, led to a raid on that specialty, with a resulting loss of 4½ per cent. Rubber preferred lost nearly 4 points, Metropolitan 4½, Glucoss 3½ and Brooklyn Union Gas 2½ per cent. Third Avenue fell in the final dealings to the lowest of the day, showing a decline of several points net. These violent declines had a sympathetic affect on the general list especialty on the Granger and Trunk lines and declines in the several points net. These violent declines had a sympathetic affect on the general list especially on the Granger and Trunk lines and declines in the railroads were extended to a point or over in many cases. Fears that the cutting of rates on grain would lead to demoralization of freight rates had an influence. There was a slight raily on covering of shorts by the bears and in sympathy with a rise in Reading first the movement of currency by express to and from the interior indicate an increase in the shipments by the banks but a still greater increase in their recelpts so that the loss on the interior movement is believed to be less than half a million dollars. Receipts of money by registered mail are said by movement is believed to be less than half a million dollars. Receipts of money by registered mall are said by banking authorities to be sufficient to more than offset this. Losses by the banks on rub-treasury operations for the week foot up $3,084,000. For some reason the opinion prevails that the loan expansion will show a considerable falling off from the recent rate of increase. More or less mystery still attaches to the phenomenal increases in loans of last week and the week before and the disposition grows to attribute them to some special operations. But a further decline in surplus reserves of several million dollars will inevitably be shown by to-morrow's bank statement.

CHICAGO-The enormous exjort busness done by Argentina last week was the dominant factor in wheat to-day

May closing %6%c under Wed-Wednesday. The other markets were depressed by the wheat weakness. May corn closed %@%c and May oats a shade lower. Provisions at the close were 2\%612\%c down.

The news from Argentina held the center of the builetia board on the board of trade to-day. Other bearish news was merely subsidiary to it. The shipments from Argentina 2,230,000 bushels, were exceeded only twice last year and have not been exceeded often in the history of the commerce of that country. In consequence May wheat nesday. The other markets were 67\%657\%c. The price touched 67\%657\%c and later 67\%c between which quotations it fluctuated for two hours. Then the descent began. Under pressure of foreign seiling and buil liquidation with scarcely any outside demand, the price of May was forced steadily down to 66\%c, at which the market for that option closed, lamentably weak and 1\%90 1\% per cent under Wednesday. New York reported 12 loads taken for export. Atiantic port clearances in wheat and flour were equal to 160,000 bushels. Primary receipts for two days were 1,074,000 bushels against 66\%00 bushels last year. Minneapolls and Luluth reported 970 cars compared with 581 last week and 688 a year ago. Receipts here were 112 cars, none of contract grade. Corn was inclined towards firmness, but finally succumbed to the wheat weakness. Trade generally was quiet. Country offerings were fair, but the shipping demand was poor. The crowd was ready to buy at the least encouragement and did hoist May up a bit while wheat was making its early struggle against further loss. The report that there was 428,000 more corn eating cattle in the country now than a year ago, caused some heavy buying from the provisions pit, which was influential in the buige. Much of this was let out again later in sympathy with wheat. Receipts here were 3\%c cars. May ranged from 216 \%c 23\%c to 23\%c to 23\%c and closed a shade depressed at 23\%c.

The trade in oats was small and influenced most of the time by corn. In view of the weakness about it the market was remarkably steady. Receipts here were 3\%c cars. May ranged from 216 \%c 23\%c to 23\%c to 23\%c to 3\%c 23\%c to 3\%c 23\%c to 23\%c to 3\%c 23\%c
